NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION.

Brilliant Event at the White House on First Day of the Year.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The most attractive feature of the great New Year's reception at the White House was the scene in the vast east room. The daylight was excluded by heavy curtains and the room was flooded with the soft light from the great hemispheres of opal glass in the ceiling, which lit up in most attractive style the toilets of the ladies and the splendid uniforms of the diplomatic corps and of the army and navy officers.

As the general public began to enter the house, however, this scene soon disappeared, and soon the room was filled with a vast throng, curiously viewing the decorations and discussing the appearance of the presidential party and other features of the New Year's day reception.

The Marine band meanwhile had turned its strains into a lively air calculated to quicken the movements of the time, and by 2 o'clock the reception was over. The members of the diplomatic body quitted the house just before noon to partake of a breakfast set for them at the residence of Secretary Olney.

Mrs. Cleveland's gown was of white and mauve-striped satin with moire effect. The bodice had a high stock collar of mauve velvet and a pretty jabot of lace falling over a vest of white satin richly embroidered with pearls. Only a few diamonds sparkled in her corsage and the entire effect of the toilet was one of great simplicity.

Mrs. Olney wore an elegant gown of gray satin and velvet. The bodice had a jacket effect with revers of lilac velvet and jabot of lace.

Mrs. Carlisle wore gray satin brocade, stylishly combined with velvet and trimmed with point lace.

Mrs. Lamont's gown was white, the skirt of broadcloth edged with a band of sable. The bodice was of white satin and entirely covered with real antique lace of a handsome pattern. The front of the waist had a pleated fold of satin embroidered in a flower design with parts of it painted. The puffed sleeves, which reached to the elbow, were striped with cloth bands similarly ornamented. Diamond crescent brooch and other diamond ornaments were worn.

Mrs. Harmon, who was assisting at her first White House reception, made a handsome figure in the line. Her gown was an elegant one of rich lavender brocade, stylishly made, and worn and trimmed with duchess lace. Some sparkling jewels were worn.

Mrs. Herbert wore a French gown of light blue, brocaded silk, combined with blue velvet, chiffon and gold passementries.

Miss Morton wore wine colored silk and real point lace, giving a becoming finish to the bodice.

The ladies of the diplomatic corps wore elegant visiting dresses which reflected for the most part the latest creations of their Paris dressmaker.

INSURGENTS ACTIVE.

They Are Pushing to the Front Without Much Opposition.

HAVANA, Jan. 2.—The Cubans are again marching westward with the intention, apparently, of pushing for Los Pales and Alfonso XIII. Pales is slightly southward and a little to the west of Cabezas, the most westerly point yet reached by the insurgents and where they are reported to have burned the railroad station a day or so ago.

The Spanish officials explain this movement westward by saying that the insurgents intend to return eastward toward the province of Santa Clara, through the northern part of the Sagua district.

But as this would be the most roundabout and utterly incomprehensible way of proceeding eastward, the friends of the insurgents ridicule the idea and continue insisting that the forces of Gomez and Maceo are steadily pushing westward.

VERY SMOOTH PAIR.

Indianapolis Diamond Thief Is None Other Than C. A. Hardin.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 2.—Dick Wilson, who grabbed a tray containing about $1,000 worth of diamonds in the store of C. J. Hollis and ran with them, but was captured after an exciting chase, has been identified as C. A. Hardin.

He, with a man named Elrod, some years ago, it is alleged, robbed the Wells-Fargo Express company of a package containing $55,000. He was arrested, but acquitted because of lack of evidence. His wife, who is also under arrest, is thought to be a notorious shoplifter, as a number of stolen articles were found in her room. Elrod, it is said, is wanted by the police in Kansas City.

Getting In Good Shape.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The Union Pacific reorganization committee announces that it has received a majority of all Union division main line and Kansas division first mortgage bonds in circulation, as well as large deposits of junior bonds, and nearly one-half of the capital stock.

Tackled the Indians.

EL PASO, Tex., Jan. 2.—A team composed of Indian students from the territory school at Albuquerque, N. M., said to be the crack football team of the territory, met El Paso's eleven here and were defeated by the score of 12 to 0. Fitzsimmons played right tackle for El Paso.

Explosion In a Mine.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Jan. 2.—Five men were badly burned, three of them probably fatally, by an explosion of gas in the Girard mine. The flesh was so terribly roasted that it dropped from their arms and faces. The explosion was caused by a naked lamp igniting the gas.

Russia Gets the Monopoly.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 2.—An irade has been issued for the grant of the petroleum monopoly to the Russian company.

THE CUTTHROATS

Who Have Invaded the Transvaal May Need Help.

THE PRESIDENT WILL REPEL THEM

Dr. Jameson Has Been Doing the Larceny Act In South Africa For Great Britain For a Long Time, But He Has Now Caused His Employer Very Great Alarm By His Indiscretion.

PRETORIA, Jan. 2.—An uprising has occurred at Johannesburg. Three hundred more armed men belonging to the British chartered company have crossed the frontier and President Kruger is determined to repel the freebooters by force of arms.

Dr. Jameson, the leader of the party of British South African company sympathizers now engaged apparently in an invasion of the Transvaal, is the administrator for the British South African company's territories in Mashonaland and Matabeleland. He is the son of a Scotch journalist and was educated for the medical profession.

But just as he began to make his mark as a practitioner he decided to go to South Africa, and in the early '70s he reached the diamond fields and soon acquired a high reputation and a remunerative practice in the treatment of the typhoid-malarial disease known as "camp fever," which is very prevalent in the South African mining districts.

In fact Dr. James was so successful that he was on the point of returning to Scotland, when he was persuaded by Mr. Cecil Rhodes, premier of Cape Colony, to enter the service of the British South African company, in which not only Mr. Rhodes, but all his friends, are understood to be largely interested.

As administrator for the land owned by the British South Africa company, Dr. Jameson has shown considerable executive ability and has proved that he is not lacking in the kind of strategic skill which has made more than one British chartered company acquire vast expanses of territory at little expense, although in some instances with considerable bloodshed and duplicity.

When the British chartered company engaged in its little war against the unfortunate King Lobengula of Matabeleland Dr. Jameson was the prime mover in all the successful operations which first brought about the Matabele war and eventually the practical annexation of that vast territory to Great Britain.

The Feeling In Germany.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—The news of the invasion of the Transvaal republic by an armed British force has created a decided sensation. The Kreuz Zietung, commenting on the news says: "Everywhere the same greed and bad faith. Today it is Africa, yesterday it was South America."

In discussing the invasion of the Transvaal by Dr. Jamison and the forces of the British South Africa company, all the newspapers here declare that his action constitutes a serious and unjustifiable breach of the peace against which Germany must protest.

The National Zeitung remarks that German interests demands the maintenance of the independence of the South African republic and it expects that the government will vigorously defend and come to President Kruger's aid in case of necessity.

The Vossische Zeitung says: "The action of Dr. Jamison can not be tolerated. It is the duty of the German government to immediately take energetic steps to protect endangered German interests and at the same time those of our kinsmen, the Boers. It is impossible to protest too strongly against this act of violence upon the part of the British."

British Arrogance.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—A dispatch from The Hague says the Rotterdamsche Courant regards Mr. Jameson's action in the Transvaal as a most flagrant example of British arrogance. It admits that Holland can do nothing for the Boers, and fears that England will seize the opportunity to wipe out the stain of the Majubahill incident. It also expresses the hope that Germany will come to the rescue.

A Berlin correspondent says: "The crisis is clearly endangering the Anglo-German relations. Public opinion is excited and angry and without doubt the government will interfere because relations have gradually arisen between the Transvaal and Germany which have assumed, in the public mind, almost the shape of a moral protectorate by Germany over the Transvaal."

Official Inquiry to England.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—The Kolnische Zeitung states that Germany has addressed an official inquiry to England as to the steps the English government intended to take to restore the status quo in the Transvaal.

Two More Escaped.

ALTON, Ills., Jan. 2.—A letter received from W. L. Sachtleben by his father bore the tidings that two more of the Kurds arrested and on trial for the murder of F. G. Lenz, the Pittsburg wheelman, have escaped, and that in the present unsettled state of affairs at Erzerum and throughout Armenia pursuit would be useless.

Struck a Mule.

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 1.—The Chicago fast mail train on the Illinois Central southbound due here at 1:58 a. m., struck a mule two miles north of Holly Springs, Miss., derailing the engine, baggage and mail cars and three coaches. The two Pullman sleepers did not leave the track. The fireman was fatally injured.

Schooner Elwood Wrecked.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 2.—The schooner Elwood, Captain F. F. Wyman, is a total wreck in Alaska. One sailor was drowned and the remainder of the crew only reached shore after a brave struggle. Captain Wyman and four sailors came down on the Topeka while the others remained in Alaska.

MRS. DAVIDSON'S GRAFT.

She Makes a Rather Big Haul From an Aged Boston Lady.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—Further investigation into the case of Mrs. Davidson of San Francisco, charged with wrongdoing by Rev. Charles O. Brown of that city, brings the fact to light that Mrs. Davidson did once live in Boston, and that she had an interesting career, in which she managed to get considerable money from one person before she left the city.

In 1890 and 1891 Mrs. Davidson was a member of Rev. Nehemiah Boynton's congregation at the Union church on Columbus avenue, and later became a prominent member of Tremont Temple congregation. At that time she was peddling starch and by her eloquence she sold a large stock with a good profit and made a good many friends, among whom was Mrs. Sarah J. Stevens, an old lady about 80 years old, who became deeply interested in Mrs. Davidson and her alleged religious work.

Mrs. Stevens had considerable money invested in bonds, and when they were called in and paid Mrs. Davidson learned of the amount of ready cash held by her friend and persuaded Mrs. Stevens to loan her $2,800 on a note at 4 per cent to enable Mrs. Davidson to start into dressmaking. Soon afterward, wanting more money, she persuaded Mrs. Stevens to loan $2,000 more also on a 10 years' note, but this time at 8 per cent.

Mrs. Davidson went to Chicago in 1893, and from there to San Francisco. Her payments of the interest on the notes, it is said, have been far and few between. In connection to her dealings with Mrs. Stevens and appeals for remittances, she has written very flowery letters.

Not His First Experience.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—Scandal is being added to scandal in the sensational developments of the accusations made by the Rev. Charles O. Brown against Mrs. Mary Davidson. The reverend gentleman declares that he is no new victim of the wiles of blackmailers. For the second time within 18 months he has been made the mark of scheming women who entered his sanctuary to trap and persecute him.

Nearly two years ago, he declares, Mrs. M. A. Stockton, member of his own congregation, a woman who assumed a Christian spirit and won friends in the church, planned upon him a scheme of blackmail, which would have succeeded were it not for timely aid which came to him from an unexpected source.

STRIKE THREATENED.

Philadelphia Streetcar Employes In a Very Ugly Mood.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2.—At an early hour this morning the situation of affairs in the street railway trouble was very grave. The employes were then in executive session with their leaders and various committees and it was evident from the atmosphere of things that a second strike could be easily precipitated.

The matter under discussion was the result of a conference held earlier in the night by a subcommittee of the employes and General Manager Beetem of the Union Traction company. This meeting lasted three hours and at its conclusion the aspect of affairs was favorable for an adjustment of the difficulties.

In answer to questions the men said they came as employes of the company but do not deny their membership to the Amalgamated Association of Railway workers, which has been the stumbling block throughout. An earnest discussion then followed on the proposition made by the company last Monday night asking the men to agree that all differences are adjusted if the 200 imported motormen and conductors were put at the foot of the extra list and the old men given their former runs.

In consequence of disagreements among the men no decision could be reached, and at 3 o'clock this morning they adjourned to make a poll of the various divisions, after which the committee will meet to decide whether or not a strike shall be declared.

To Develop Virginia Gold Mines.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 2.—N. K. Fairbank, the millionaire lard refiner of Chicago; E. K. Willard and T. D. Hooper, bankers of New York; General T. M. Logan of Richmond, and others, have organized at Richmond the Piedmont Gold Belt Chartered company with a capital stock of $2,000,000, for the purpose of developing large gold mining properties in Buckingham county, Va.

Want Pay For Their Presence.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 2.—The Indiana Populists are very desirous that their national convention should be held here. They are urging the commercial bodies of Indianapolis to hang up a fat purse for their national committee to consider at its meeting in St. Louis on Jan. 17. Of the amount required the merchants and hotel men of this city have already raised $5,000.

"Spike" Sullivan Wins.

WOBURN, Mass., Jan. 2.—Over 1,000 sporting men from Boston and other places attended the Woburn Athletic club fights last night. The principal event was that between Billy Brierly, the Irish lightweight champion, and Billy Sullivan, better known as "Spike" Sullivan, of Boston. The men fought eight rounds. Sullivan getting the decision at the finish.

Driven Insane by Death of His Son.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Jan. 2.—The 6-year-old son of Octave Flighman of Berkley while eating persimmons last Friday accidentally got a seed lodged in his windpipe which caused his death in a short time. His father, who was deeply attached to the boy, became so affected that he has become hopelessly insane.

BRITISH HEDGING

They Are Now Inclined to Submit to Arbitration.

SENTIMENT UNDERGOES A CHANGE

English Newspapers Which at First Sneered at the Monroe Doctrine Have Concluded It Is a Pretty Good Thing to Tie to After All—A Lecturer's View of the Matter.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The New York correspondent of The Chronicle describes the maps which are said to have been made by the Dutch in the eighteenth century fixing the western boundary of Dutch Guiana (now British Guiana) on a practically identical line with the Schomburg line, and says in a special article:

"We are glad to observe a general disposition on the part of the press to recognize that the Venezuelan case must not be pushed and that the Schomburg line may be within the province of diplomacy. We are able to say on high authority that Lord Granville and Fitzmaurice between them had virtually concluded with General Guzman Blanco (on behalf of Venezuela) a treaty containing an arbitration clause covering among other things the boundary dispute. Unfortunately, when Lord Salisbury came into power in 1885, one of his first acts was to cancel the arbitration clause so far as it covered the boundary dispute."

The article then proceeds: "As a result of our inquiries we find that Sir Robert Schomburg gave no proof of the existence of a Dutch fort at Point Barima, upon which the evidence in favor of the northern portion of the boundary largely depends."

After a detailed discussion of this point in connection with the archives, The Chronicle concludes: "On the whole our researches have convinced us that, while there is good grounds for accepting the extravagant Venezuela claim, there exists a debatable land toward both the north and south of Shomburg line. This is virtually admitted by Lord Salisbury, and it will be a grave error should the public imagine that a rigid insistence upon the Schomburg line and the declaration that we do not admit arbitration on one side of that line constitute the essence of the English case."

BRITAIN WANTS CUBA.

The Venezuelan Incident Has a Far Reaching Significance.

DETROIT, Jan. 2.—Don. M. Dickinson says:

"Lord Salisbury's unnecessary arguments against the Monroe doctrine generally in the Venezuela matter are not aimed at the solution merely of the Venezuelan matter. The purpose chiefly is to set aside the Monroe doctrine altogether on the comparatively insignificant boundary dispute in Venezuela, and then get a foothold of dominion over Cuba especially, in accordance with her repeated efforts since 1849. England owns the enormous Spanish "debt."

A London Lecturer Says Something.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Frederick Harrison, the well known critic and reviewer, lecturing in London, said the Venezuelan crisis presented a very real danger and would leave formidable problems unsolved. The Monroe doctrine expressed a policy which all that was wise in English opinion must desire to prevail. A most striking fact, he said, was the absolute isolation of England. In the event of war the United States would suffer in the first instance, but in the end would raise such affect as would eventually be triumphant against all Europe.

PREFERRED DEATH TO ARREST.

Farmers Have an Exciting Time With a Thieving Tramp.

AVILLA, Ind., Jan. 2.—A wealthy farmer living near here discovered a tramp in his house. The intruder escaped and ran into an empty barn, where he barricaded himself. Several neighbors were called and when the tramp was requested to surrender he declared he would die first.

The farmers then applied the torch and just as the roof fell in the tramp jumped out and tried to get away, but as he was completely surrounded he drew a pistol and wounded four of the farmers. Then he fired a bullet into his own head. Before he died he said his name was Gideon Houser.

Big Reward Offered.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 2.—Governor Bradley has issued a proclamation offering $500 reward for the conviction of any or all of the parties participating in the burning of Mrs. T. J. West and the murder of N. A. Dever of Marion county. Governor Bradley rendered a decision disallowing all but $4,000 of General Hendricks' claim.

Got the Drop on Him.

ELLISVILLE, Miss., Jan. 2.—Three masked men covered Sheriff B. E. Devall with revolvers and demanded that he open the safe. The sheriff gave them the keys, they opened the safe and took about $8,000 belonging to the county. The robbers tied the sheriff securely and, when they left, locked the office door behind them.

Took In the County.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—At midnight on Dec. 31 the limits of Brooklyn became contemporaneous with the county of Kings. The government of the two divisions merged and the county of Kings, for most purposes, passed out of existence. The legal title of the new corporation is the "City of Brooklyn."

THE MOSIER CASE.

IT COMES UP IN MAYOR'S COURT THIS MORNING.

J. C. Hoxter, the Prosecuting Witness, Does Not Show Up and the Hearing Is Continued Until Next Monday—Police Court News.

There was quite a little crowd in the court of Mayor Nichols this morning when the case against Ben Mosier was called. Mosier is charged with running a gambling house by J C. Hoxter, and the case was set for a hearing this morning, but after four witnesses had been examined it was learned that Hoxter had left the city early this morning. The case was then continued until Monday morning at 8 o'clock.

There is a suspicion that Hoxter has been fixed. One of the witnesses said to a STAR reporter that he had received $7 25 and left the city, so he would not have to appear against Mosier. Members of Hoxter's family informed Marshal Blain when he went there this morning that Jud had left at 7:30 o'clock with a boy, who had called at the house for him.

There was some amusement during the trial. Each of the witnesses denied any knowledge of a poker room being connected with the house. They all said that games were played there for the drinks, and that there was a residence over the saloon, but they were not aware that Mosier had anything to do with a gambling house. Hoxter in his affidavit alleged that there was one, and said that he had played and the gamekeeper had refused to cash his checks. Outside parties say that there was a suspicion that a game was being framed up for a "sucker," and Hoxter wanted in on it, and thus made the "holler." At any rate it has caused more interest in police court than anything that has occurred since Detective McEldowney caused the upheaval in the city.

Mayor Nichols says that he can secure Hoxter if he wants him, and that the case will be investigated and that the adjourned hearing will take place

Eight tramps were registered at the Carlos over Wednesday night. The register will be kept very strict from now until it becomes warm weather, and each tramp will have to register his name, residence and occupation as heretofore, and in each instance it must be done.

RAILROAD NOTES

The holiday trade on the railroads this year has been the greatest for years.

Jacob Klump, engineer of maintenance of way of the Big Four, was in the city today.

J. H. Dull, the Erie trainmaster, was down from Galion today, looking after business in his department of the road.

The machinists and boilermakers of the Big Four shops gave a fine ball on New Year's eve, at Delaware, which was attended by many Marionites, among whom were W M. Linn, P. Egan, W. McGrath, J. H. Smith, and F. R. Franks. The committee in charge of the Delaware affair were James Yanda, Lewis Borneman, W. F. Thompson, Edward Egan and James McNerey. Pat Keefe did the calling.

Trains were delayed here today on account of an accident that occurred on the curve of the Erie main track at the rear of the Marion Manufacturing company. Train 77, pulled by two large engines, was passing at that point when the rail turned and both engines were thrown to the ground. The steam was shut off and the engines stopped, but they were in such a condition that the one could be of no assistance to the other. The switch engines went up the Big Four tracks and came back on the Erie tracks, pulling the train away from the engine, and in that manner they got the engines back on the track by the assistance of the yard men with the switch engines.

Marion and Crestline Battle for Polo Honors New Year's Day.

Over in the Crawford county village of Crestline, where polo players and sluggers are born, not made, are four or five of about as able bodied men as ever appeared on a rink floor to play polo, but despite this Marion was able to take one game from them New Year's In the afternoon a forty minutes' play between the two clubs was pulled off, and it was nip and tuck to the end as to who would win. There was some kicking, but it was a good game, and when time was called Marion had won in a score of 7 to 5. This made Marion lovers of polo happy, and it was believed that the home team would do even better in the evening. After a season of skating with the best music in the city, the players appeared on the floor for the evening game

Lou Allen, Jack Clary Charles Maag and A L Cull appeared for Marion and Fecker, Moorehead, Burkett and Griefstein, with Parker, who played in the evening, as substitute. W. Hartman blew the whistle and Harry Scribner held the watch. Hartman placed the ball and the whistle sounded. Crestline was out for blood and not only out-played the Marion boys but played so hard that they seemed to frighten them. The Crestline team seemed to think that the art of polo laid in hard striking and they did not seem very particular just where they struck Early in the first half of the game Jack Clary was struck on the knee and had to leave the floor, and Sam Creasap took his place. This weakened the home team, and for twenty minutes the Crawford county men made little monkeys of them. When time was called in the first half Marion had been able to cage the ball once while Moorehead's men had a score of seven.

The boys rested the alloted five minutes and took the floor again, and Crestline renewed their old tactics and run their score up to seventeen before the home team had thought what they were doing, and then the boys pulled themselves together, and just to show that there was no ill feeling played a little polo themselves They caged the ball three times before the whistle sounded for the close of the game, and they were cheered for it. The crowd was a happy one and didn't mind the defeat so much, for they knew it was an off night for the boys.

Diekman, the Printer, Continues His Efforts To Defraud

The nerve of Herman Diekman, the German printer is unlimited, but it is now believed that he is at the end of his string in crooked work in this vicinity C Lederman is now at Columbus and is having some work done at Richard Horn's office in this city. Diekman, while in Columbus, hunted Mr Lederman up and presented a bill from Mr. Horn for the amount of the work. Lederman suspicioned that there was something wrong and gave him a check for the amount. Of course he was unable to secure the money and returned here to work further money-getting schemes, but did not succeed.

SIX LIVES LOST BY THE BURNING OF A DWELLING

John Hibbard, Wife and Two Children, and Two Guests at Their Home, Burnt To Death—Three Children and a Servant Escape.

[Special to the DAILY STAR.]

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 2.—At 4:30 this morning the residence of John H. Hibbard, secretary of the Central Ohio Natural Gas and Fuel company, at 132 east Long street was found to be on fire The whole interior was ablaze and though the department quickly extinguished the flames it was found that Mr Hibbard, his wife and two nieces, Mrs Charles Lee and Miss Fay Hibbard, of Barnesville, Ohio, who were spending the holidays there, and two children of Mrs. Hibbard, Allen aged 7, and Dorothy aged 5, were burnt to death

The servant, Anna Bell, and three children, Webster, John and Hinton Hibbard, aged 8, 11 and 13, escaped by jumping from a window in the second story

A UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT.

Former Deaf Mutes Give Recitations and Other Performances.

A unique and interesting entertainment was rendered the other night for the friends and patrons of the Wright-Humason School For the Oral Instructors of the Deaf in New York by the pupils of that institution All who participated were persons who are totally deaf and would be mutes had they not been taught mechanically to speak. The first part of the programme consisted of the recitation of "Miles Standish," by Helen Keller, a 15 year old girl, who has been both deaf and blind since she was 18 months old. She is now learning to read the lips of a person speaking by laying the fingers upon them. She committed the poem to memory from the embossed characters used by the blind alphabet When in doubt, she refreshed her memory by means of the raised letters.

Although her articulation is necessarily imperfect, her words were audible and intelligible to most of those in the room. The reading was illustrated by a series of seven tableaus in Puritan costume. The pupils who took part in the tableaus were Bertha M Freeman, J. Pierson Radcliffe, Will J Quinlan and Willard K Taft. They were followed by Katharine Woodward, an 8-year-old child in a Greek dance.

The performance was concluded by a two act farce, written by one of the pupils, Robert H. Moulton. There were eight speaking parts, all of which were enacted by persons who had been taught to speak. As they were all totally deaf, it was necessary for them to take their cues by watching each other's lips. The performance would have been a very creditable one for any amateurs.

Mr. Moulton, who played the leading part, spoke with great distinctness. He has been prepared for college at the school and will enter Columbia next fall. He expects to have no difficulty in recitation and will be able to understand part of the lectures by watching the lecturers' lips. The others in the cast were Bertha M. Freeman, Florence Shattuck, Katharine Woodward, Carrie Macnel, Willard K. Taft, Francis Bell and Mary Nicholas.

The entertainment was the first of the sort ever attempted at the school, and Mr. Wright was much pleased with its success The preparation for it, he said, had been of great value as a means of practical instruction to the pupils.—New York Sun.

A BRITISH ALLIANCE.

Rumor That William Waldorf Astor Is to Marry Lady Churchill.

They say now that it is Lady Randolph Churchill on whom Willie Wallie Aster is about to confer his name, his Spanish mines and a share of his enormous estate.

It seems a good and reasonable match enough, but rumor has always had it that Lady Randolph long since gave her heart to another—to the young guardsman whom she nursed so tenderly through the consequences of a severe accident

Willie Wallie would indeed be fortunate to capture such a prize, for Lady Randolph is still young—near 41—clever as they make 'em and with an excellently well assured position in English society.

But, then, this is only rumor, which may be very wide of the mark and may flatter Willie Wallie's vanity to an inordinate degree.—Cholly Knickerbocker in New York Recorder.

THE BOUNDARY LINE.

DOUBT THAT THE VENEZUELAN COMMISSION CAN LOCATE IT.

Meager Facts to Support Either Claimant. The New National Library Building. Senate Committee Rooms—Advantages of the Party In Power.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Special.—I learn from Lighthouse circles that there is grave doubt whether or not the Venezuelan boundary commission appointed by the president will be able to locate a divisional line between the possessions of Great Britain and those of Venezuela It is rather an extraordinary state of affairs that so little actual evidence concerning the boundary in question is available The suggestion has been made that the British government may have found important records in the archives at Madrid, but this is pronounced impossible by Senor Andrade the Venezuelan minister here. Senor Andrade says all the Spanish records are known to his government. He admits that they do not set up an incontrovertible case but argues that the evidence is much stronger in support of the claims of his government than in favor of the British claims Senor Andrade looks upon it as quite probable that the commission will have difficulty in locating a line. In fact it is generally admitted that it cannot do so except on the principle of equity

Lack of Documentary Evidence.

The British acquired their territory in Guiana from the Dutch, and Venezuela acquired hers by attaining independence from Spain Great Britain took possession of the establishments of Demerara, Essequibo and Berbice which the Dutch had acquired by conquest from Spain. But the border between the Dutch possessions and the Spanish was never fixed, and for a long time there existed between them a wide stretch of country uninhabited and then considered undesirable. During the last century, settlement has made its way into this strip of territory from both sides, and naturally both Venezuela and British Guiana have set up claims to the soil So far as the original descriptions and surveys go the United States commission will discover a lamentable lack of evidence. There are some collateral facts which strongly support the Venezuelan claim, but these are not conclusive Some good lawyers who have looked into the case think there is no proper way to settle the matter except by referring the question to an umpire, whose decision would have to be based more upon the rights acquired by settlement than upon any actual title possessed by either disputant.

If this view of the case be taken by the United States commission of course England will be accorded a large slice of the disputed tract. Members of the cabinet with whom I have talked say they would not consider it a humiliation to this government if the finding of the commission should chance to be in favor of Great Britain. On the contrary, they think that would be evidence of our high mindedness and honesty of purpose Other critics do not take so mild a view They say that it might at least have been better to ascertain as nearly as possible what the facts were before raising so much excitement all over the world over the danger of war

A New Object of Interest.

The national capital has a new show place Added to the White House, the war and navy department, the treasury, the pension and patent offices, the Smithsonian and natural museum, the dead letter office, Cabin John bridge, the surgical and medical museum, the fish commission and congress, is a new and most brilliant attraction. I speak of the new national library building, now nearly finished and open daily to visitors. Every day hundreds of men and women throng its spacious corridors, where the workmen are still engaged putting in the marble decorations, and go away delighted with what they have seen and prouder than ever of the country. No one can visit this superb structure without a feeling that he lives in a great and progressive land. It is without any doubt the finest library building in the world It is, moreover, one of the very finest specimens of architecture to be found anywhere on the globe I have traveled to some extent, and I am free to say that this new library is the most beautiful building I ever saw. The new parliament house in Berlin is next to it, but is excelled by the Washington structure in simplicity and grandeur The two palaces are not unlike The only thing I dislike about the new library is that the architects were designed at are still petitioning congress for adequate payment for their work.

Among the improvements talked of in the national capitol is an extensive water power at the Great falls of the Potomac Engineers report that there is power enough in the falls to furnish all the electric light and power needed for the city of Washington. It is proposed to run the street cars and to light the city by means of electricity transmitted over the 13 miles of line, a problem presenting no difficulties that have not been successfully overcome elsewhere It is also proposed to make an effort to introduce on this electric light manufacturing Heavy manufacturing is not desired and I doubt if any sort of factories will find encouragement among the citizens.

Loss of Gorgeous Quarters.

Democratic senators are dreading the loss of their fine committee rooms in the senate wing of the capitol. They mourn the necessity which compels them to give up the large and sumptuously furnished committee suites and to accept in exchange the small rooms in the senate annex or office building which stands across the street at a safe distance of several hundred feet from the senate chamber. That is one of the disadvantages of controlling the organization of the senate. The senators of the party in power all get committee chairmanships and committee rooms in the capitol. The majority members with a few favored exceptions, are compelled to go outside for their rooms. In the wealth of this is no great hardship but when the storms beat down upon the capitol the minority senators plod through the snow or rain with anything but pleasant countenances. There is no good reason why all of the senators should not be accommodated in the senate wing. The trouble is the committee rooms are laid out on a colossal scale. It is no uncommon thing for a senator and his clerk sitting at the end of a room large enough to accommodate 50 or 60 people with [illegible] square yards each. There are [illegible] the terrace with [illegible] the senate [illegible] take breakfast [illegible] the senate [illegible] there will be [illegible]

FRIEND TO MANKIND.

WILLARD ROBINSON, WHO IS DYING IN WASHINGTON.

He Is Known as the "Savior of Babies." Has Invented an Appliance to Cool Fever Patients—Trying to Secure a Patent to Help Humanity.

Willard Robinson, called the "Savior of Babies" because of his invention of an incubator, is dying in Washington.

His fame rests on the fact that he invented the incubator. It is a contrivance for regulating the temperature and moisture for premature babies. It has been tested in many hospitals in its operation. If the inventor should be rewarded by great good fortune his future wealth would be assured.

When Robinson went to the New York Infant asylum one day last summer to give some lectures on incubators introduced at that institution he noticed a fever patient in one of the wards. They were using the usual method to cool this patient's temperature. There was a step at the foot of his cot, and on the step was a water pail with a piece of rubber tube over the side of the pail, the other end of the tube, entered a rubber bag which was arranged so as to carry the water from the bag into a pail on the floor outside. Robinson was interested.

He asked the doctors about it, and they told him that the contrivance was clumsy and left great room for improvement. If the patient suddenly removed his arm he was apt to bring the pail down with him. Then, too, the water in the pail was likely to run out before the nurse could be aware that the bag was empty, and the condition of the patient would be seriously jeopardized by the sudden stoppage of the cold application.

The inventor went back to his little research shop in East Twenty-sixth street and built a contrivance that should furnish a steady flow of cold water. To minimize the labor and prevent the sudden checking of the stream he used the same water over again.

He built a frame of brass rods about four feet high. Two copper cylinders capable of holding ten gallons each were placed on sliding rods in a vertical position, and by an arrangement of chains, weights and pulleys the cylinders were made to balance one another. While one, filled with water, is at the top, just above the patient's head, the other rests on the floor below. The top one is filled with ice water and raised by the turning of a crank at the side. Rubber tubing passes from it down into a "worm" which is a great improvement over the rubber bag of the doctors.

After the water has circulated through the coils of the "worm" that lies on the patient's body, it passes into the lower cylinder. As soon as that cylinder gets full it is raised to the top and empties itself in turn into the other one, which has been lowered.

The invention has been used for a month at the New York hospital, and it has saved many patients and much trouble to nurses.

Robinson went to Washington for the sole purpose of getting a patent on this machine. He had made nothing from his incubators and thought that it was time to try to reap some pecuniary benefit from his work for himself and his family of three little children.

He filed his application at the patent office and was arranging to return home when he became very ill. The doctors said he had consumption in an advanced stage and held out small hopes of his recovery.

So his wife was called to his bedside. But the fate of his patent and what it means to his family is his one thought. —New York Journal

THE LAST SLAVE.

An Aged Georgia Negro Enjoys His First Freedom.

Trone Wilson, an aged negro convict who was pardoned from the Georgia penitentiary by Governor Atkinson the other day, is probably the last slave to receive the benefits of President Lincoln's emancipation proclamation.

Wilson was in jail in Liberty county as accessory to a murder when the negro race was set free by the president.

He was afterward sent to the penitentiary and now enjoys the first breath of freedom he has ever known.—New York Recorder.

THEY LOVE ACTRESSES.

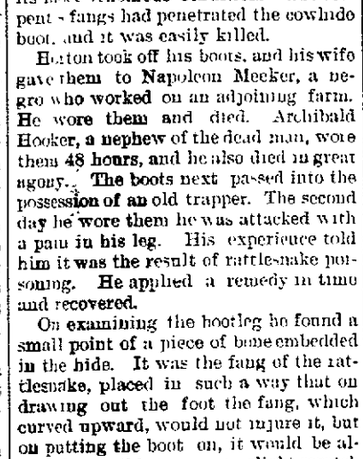
Howard Gould Said to Be In Love With Miss Clemmons.

In the bright lexicon of youth it is duly set forth that when a chappie gets up early in the morning and meets a pretty girl at an incoming steamer he means business.

Of course I can't say whether Howard Gould is engaged to Miss Catharine Clemmons or not.

He won't say himself. He does say, "Suppose you see the young lady herself and ask her what she says."

Nobody has seen her yet on this business, but a wink is oftimes as good as a nod.



CATHARINE CLEMMONS

Howard's generally jaunty and self-assured manner gives deep meaning to his flippant words.

The love of the Goulds for the stage is pronounced and well known.

George selected the lovely Miss Kingdon to share the family millions. Anna was once engaged to a young actor before Helen Castellane's bonny looks won her heart, and now along comes Howard making undoubted sheep's eyes at pretty Miss Clemmons.

I suppose it will be a match, and a very suitable one, too, according to the general trend of the Gould ambitions.—Chevy Knickerbocker in New York Recorder.

DEATH IN A BOOT LEG.

It Contained a Rattlesnake's Fang and Caused Two Deaths.

One day last summer Thomas Horton of Binghamton, N. Y., was passing through a piece of cleared land when he was bitten by a rattlesnake. The reptile was shedding its skin and therefore in its most venomous condition. The serpent's fangs had penetrated the cowhide boot, and it was easily killed.

Horton took off his boots, and his wife gave them to Napoleon Meeker, a negro who worked on an adjoining farm. He wore them and died. Archibald Hooker, a nephew of the dead man, wore them 48 hours, and he also died in great agony. The boots next passed into the possession of an old trapper. The second day he wore them he was attacked with a pain in his leg. His experience told him it was the result of rattlesnake poisoning. He applied a remedy in time and recovered.

On examining the bootleg he found a small point of a piece of bone embedded in the hide. It was the fang of the rattlesnake, placed in such a way that on drawing out the foot the fang, which curved upward, would not injure it, but on putting the boot on, it would be almost impossible to escape a slight scratch from the poison covered tooth.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

STARTED A MILL BY WIRE.

Young Woman 2,300 Miles Away Sets 800 Persons to Work.

The Dwight Manufacturing company of Chicopee, Mass., started its southern mill at Gadsden, Ala., the other day, by electricity. A young woman at Winona, Minn., touched the button that started the machinery at 1 o'clock. She christened the 15,000 horse power engine Mashenne. The Western Union Telegraph company arranged the electrical apparatus by a straight circuit of 2,300 miles. It is of 30,000 spindle capacity and is the largest in Alabama.

The electrical arrangement was fixed so as to break a bottle of champagne over the engine at the moment of christening. The mill employs 800 people, and 250 cottages are now being completed by the Dwight company.—New York World.

His $4 Bill Not Redeemed.

The other forenoon a man appeared at the subtreasury in St. Louis and presented a $4 bill of the old "continental currency" for redemption. He hit Bert Farrar, the paying teller, and nearly paralyzed that person by asking $10,000 in liquidation of the ancient obligation. He obtained this result by figuring compound interest from the date of issue, 1777, and was displeased when Mr. Farrar suggested that "10 cents per 100 pounds" was about the probable value of such stuff. Finding that neither $10,000 nor any other sum was forthcoming, he gathered up his precious possession and sorrowfully departed.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

What Keely Will Do.

Mrs. Bloomfield Moore says that, owing to the position taken by the manager of the old Keely Motor company at the annual meeting and the delay of the stockholders in accepting his proposition for a reorganization, Keely has decided to take out no patents on his inventions and would adopt a "royalty system" in dealing with his discoveries commercially. To cover the system Mrs. Moore says at least 30 patents would be required to prepare, which would take a long time and cost a great deal of money, which could be used better in developing the system.

Astor Rides In a Motocycle.

John Jacob Astor recently took his first lesson in manipulating a horseless carriage. He guided it up Fifth avenue, New York, under the instruction of a woman, who rode beside him. The vehicle was of Victoria pattern, the motive power being hidden under the seat.

VOICE FROM THE DEAD

WHAT GEORGE WASHINGTON WROTE ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

A Letter Which Is Very Significant at the Present Crisis—Did Not Wish America to Interfere In Squabbles With Europe "if Rightfully It Can Be Done."

In the manuscript department of the British museum, London, there are stowed away hundreds of autographic letters of men famous in modern and ancient history. While in London last summer Mr. O. O. Stealy, the Washington correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal found among these old letters an autograph one from George Washington, written from Philadelphia April 22, 1793, to Lord Earl of Buchan. A part of the letter refers to foreign complications and furnishes an interesting chapter at this time. With the letter was the following note written by the Earl of Buchan, brother of Lord Erskine.

"On the 18th of January, 1793, I wrote to Mr Washington on the happy prospects America might entertain if by any means it could abstain from mingling in European politics. I laid before him the vanity and folly of preferring the indulgence of national pride, vanity and resentment to the slow but certain benefits to be permanently obtained by peace and internal prosperity. I ventured also to recommend as the great objects to the executive of America peace and union with the red natives and attention to national education."

To these sentiments the president answered in the following letter. The first part of the letter relates to private affairs and indicates that General Washington and Lord Buchan were old and intimate friends. Then the letter proceeds to the subject matter as follows:

"The favorable wishes which your lordship has expressed for the prosperity of this young and rising country cannot but be gratefully received by all its citizens and every lover of it, one means to the contribution of which and its happiness is very judiciously portrayed in the following words of your letter: 'To be little heard of in the great world of politics.' These words, I can assure your lordship, are expressive of my sentiments on this head, and I believe it is the sincere wish of united America to have nothing to do with the political intrigues or the squabbles of European nations; but, on the contrary, to exchange commodities and live in peace and unity with all the inhabitants of the earth, and this I am persuaded they will do if rightfully it can be done—to administer justice to and receive it from every power with whom they are connected will, I hope, be always found the most prominent feature in the administration of this country, and I flatter myself that nothing short of imperious necessity can occasion a breach with any of them. Under such a system, if we are allowed to pursue it, the agricultural and mechanical arts, the wealth and population of these states, will increase with that degree of rapidity as to baffle all calculations and must surpass any idea your lordship can hitherto have entertained on the occasion.

"To evince that our views, whether realized or not, are expanded I take the liberty of sending you the plan of a new city, situated about the center of the Union of these states, which is designed for the permanent seat of the government, and we are at this moment deeply engaged and far advanced in extending the inland navigation of the river (Potomac) on which it stands and the branches thereof through a tract of as rich country for hundreds of miles as any in the world. Nor is this a solitary instance of attempts of the kind, although it is the only one which is near completion and in partial use. Several other important ones are commenced, and little doubt is entertained that in ten years, if left undisturbed, we shall open a communication by water with all the lakes northward and westward of us with which we have territorial connections and an inland navigation in a few years more from Rhode Island to Georgia, inclusive, partly by cuts between the great bays and sounds and partly between the islands and sand banks and the main from Albemarle sound to the river St Mary's. To these may also be added the erection of bridges over considerable rivers and the commencement of turnpike roads as further indication of the improvements in hand. With great esteem and respect, I have the honor to be your lordship's most obed't, h'ble servant,

"G. WASHINGTON."

Mr. Stealy took a copy of the letter, and it is not believed that it has ever been printed in this country.

Hanged, but Not Dead.

A remarkable story comes from Pomeroy, Wash., where Henry Meyers was recently hanged for murder. After being pronounced dead by physicians the body was turned over to an old German friend of the murderer, who by means of simple restoratives revived the officially dead man. Three reputable residents of Pomeroy assert that they have personally conversed with Meyers within a week and that he is now in hiding from the authorities, and will shortly be taken out of the country. County officers declare that Meyers' body was interred in potter's field. An official investigation will be made immediately. —New York Sun.

Used Cigar and Bottle.

Several persons are telling a story, with apparent satisfaction, of a 2 year-old child in Montana who smokes cigars with evident relish. What are the philanthropists of that state doing to allow such an exhibition as that of a baby pulling at a cigar in turn with a bottle? —Boston Traveller.

SELECTIONS

THE AVERAGE MURDERER.

In Prison He Appears Happy and Grows Fat.

One of the strangest of all the strange phases of human nature is the cheerfulness of the average murderer after conviction and sentence. There are, of course, exceptions to the rule; there are murderers who await execution in horror and dread, and occasionally one dies of this torment before the fatal day arrives. But these are rare cases and do not affect the correctness of the proposition that the average murderer is a rather cheerful person, sleeps well, has a good appetite, grows fat, and, till his last hour, manifests a lively interest in such worldly affairs as occupied his mind before he was caught, caged and marked for the hangman.

Trouble of mind is not conducive to the taking on of fat. A convict whose day of death had been finally fixed, and who had no ground on which to base the faintest hope of clemency, might affect cheerfulness or even jocularity in the presence of visitors. But there is no affecting a growth of adipose. The man whose weight is increasing day by day, even in the shadow of the gallows, is not in mental distress. The mind and body are too closely related for either to be tormented without the full participancy of the other. Here is an extract from a reporter's account of a visit to Harry Hayward, at Minneapolis, who was put to death for one of the most cruel, cold blooded murders ever perpetrated:

"'Do you think you will hang?'

"'Yes, I think I will, old man.' Hayward replied. His face did not change color, nor did he flinch. Then he continued, laughing: 'A fellow has to go some time, and it might as well be one time as another. Only I wish it well done and no bungling. But, by the bye, what do you think about the Corbett and Fitzsimmons fight—or rather the one that did not come off? I will tell you what I believe. I think Fitz was afraid of Jim. I would hate to see Jim get whipped, for he is an American. But the fight will never come off now,' he added.

"'How is your health, Mr. Hayward?'

"'Splendid. When I came in here, I weighed 160, but I have gained 40 pounds. You see, I have had nothing to worry me, have slept well and eaten heartily and will continue to do so until the end.'"

If this were an exceptional case, it would be interesting only as a possible indication of lunacy. But it presents nothing that is unusual. It is strange only because it is impossible for the average mind to conceive of such cheerfulness, such indifference, under the conditions surrounding this man.—Washington Post.

Extermination of the Wild Carrot.

A correspondent inquires how to suppress the wild carrot. This is certainly a pestilent weed, but it is rarely troublesome in cultivated fields, and this shows that it can be kept down by moderate cultivation, and if the weed is destroyed in waste places it will soon be comparatively harmless. If the plants are mowed off as often as the flowers appear, they will eventually be destroyed, although they will continue to throw out stems from the bottom after each cutting, so that at first they will appear to increase, rather than diminish. Sheep will eat the young plants, and they can be pulled out by hand when the ground is wet, which is a laborious, but sure, means of extirpation. If the root is cut off with a spud some distance below the surface of the ground, the plant will usually die. A detailed account of this and many other of our aggressive weeds will be found in Farmers' Bulletin, No. 28, published by the United States department of agriculture, with the best means of exterminating the individuals and different classes of weeds.—Garden and Forest.

Four Doughty Veterans.

One of the French papers which have been devoting a great deal of attention to Napoleon Bonaparte of late has been entertaining its readers by having a census made of the sole remaining survivors of Napoleon's grand army.

Four of these men only are now left. The eldest is Jean Jacques Sabatier, who was born on the 15th of April, 1792, at Vernoux l'Ardeche, where he has lived in retirement for many years. Then come Victor Baillod, Jean Bousset and Joseph Rose, aged respectively 101 years and one month, 100 years and one month, and 100 years and a few days.

All are as hearty and vigorous as can be expected, in spite of their experiences as long as 82 years ago in that terrible retreat when the beggarly remnant of the greatest army the world has ever seen, worn out with cold and hunger, angrily called to the victor of Marengo and Austerlitz to get off his horse and share in the miseries of his men.

A Fireproof Cement.

An important result attended a test made by order of the Reichsbank—the German government's banking establishment—with a safe made of cement with steel wire placed in between. The question to be decided was whether it is practicable to build vaults of this material for safety against fire. A safe was placed upon a pyre of logs drenched with kerosene, which, after being set on fire kept the safe for half an hour exposed to a heat of about 1,800 degrees F.—that is, a heat in which iron will melt. Two hours after the safe was opened, and the contents—silk, paper, draft blanks and a maximum thermometer—were found to be absolutely uninjured, and the maximum thermometer showed that within the safe the temperature at no time during the test rose above 85 degrees.

IT WAS EASY.

But It Required a Certain Kind of Ammunition After All.

The two men stood in front of the penny-in-the-slot weighing machine, looking red in the face, as though from some immense muscular exertion.

"Now, let me see if I read the directions right," said one, taking another look at the paragraph in a newspaper. "Yes, we tried it right. This is what it says: 'All that is necessary if you wish to be weighed on a penny in-the-slot machine and haven't got the penny is to apply your lips to the slot and blow hard. The air cannot escape, and the pressure will set the machine in operation at once.'

"Well, I'll be blowed if I can do it," said he. "You try it once. Maybe your lungs are stronger than mine."

As the other man stepped on the platform to take a try at it several passers-by, attracted by the odd sight, stopped to see the operation. Soon a party was gathered around the machine.

In vain did the man puff and blow till he almost burst the buttons from his waistcoat.

"I give it up," said he, casting a sheepish look at the crowd that gave him the laugh.

Just then a bootblack with a grimy face but bright eyes wiggled through the crowd.

"Aw, dat's dead easy," said he. "Just let me show de mug how ter do it." And then he climbed on the platform, put his lips to the slot and blew, not so very hard, either, but a click was heard, the pointer flew around and told the wondering crowd that the "kid" weighed 94 pounds.

"It's a cinch," was the contemptuous remark of the urchin. "Try it again."

Another man tried it, and again was the proverb verified about the battle not always being to the strong.

The crowd wondered.

"How do you do it, kid?" said one.

"Humph! Dat's tellin," he replied. "I win more money at dat game dan I kin lose shooting de cubes."

"Give you a quarter to tell."

"It's a go, boss. Now, watch me." And the urchin climbed on the machine again.

"Gi' me a cent," said he.

"What for?" asked the man.

"What fur? Why, to stick in me mug. Den I puts me mout' on de slot and pokes in de cent wid me tongue, see? Dat's what fur. It's dead easy when yer on. Savvy?"

The crowd "savvied."—New York Tribune.

BANKRUPTCY

—of the physical being is the result of drawing incessantly upon the reserve capital of nerve force. The wear, tear and strain of modern life are concentrated upon the nervous system. The young men of our day become sufferers from nervous debility or exhaustion, nervous prostration or weakness. This may be the result of too much mental worry and excitement, or the result of bad practices and excesses, or pernicious habits, contracted in youth, through ignorance. They feel irritable, weak and nervous with such distressing symptoms as backache, dizziness, shooting pains in head or chest, sometimes indigestion. The middle-aged men, as well, suffer from exhaustion, loss of manly power, low spirits, impaired memory, and many derangements of mind and body. The ill-used brain is morbidly wide awake when the overworked business man attempts to find rest in bed.

The physicians and specialists of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute devote their best energies to reclaiming and restoring such unfortunates to health and happiness. They have written a book of 168 pages, treating of these maladies and setting forth a rational means of home treatment for their cure. It is sent securely sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of 10 cents for postage.

Chance to Be Good.

The pedestrian looked scornfully at the beggar who had accosted him.

"You say you want money for your starving wife and family," he repeated. "I don't believe you have any."

"Well, wot of it?" asked the beggar brazenly.

"I believe you're lying," persisted the pedestrian, with conviction.

"Wot if I am?" said the beggar doggedly.

The pedestrian showed his astonishment at such a display of utter depravity, but he held firmly to his purpose.

"I believe you only want money to buy liquor," he said.

"Wot if I do?" returned the beggar.

"In that case," said the pedestrian slowly and impressively, "you show yourself to be a liar, a vagabond and a drunkard—a man who is hardly worth saving." Then, after a moment of thought, he added, "Do you know that the liquor evil is, to a certain extent, its own corrective?"

"Nix," replied the beggar.

"Well, it is. Scientists tell us that it is killing off the weak and inferior classes, and in that way you may be said to be doing some good. Do you"—Before he could finish the beggar's hand was thrust toward him, palm upward.

"Please, mister, won't you help the good work along?" asked the man in rags.

He got a quarter, and the lecture was never finished.—Chicago Post.

A Misfit Quotation.

Granger Gravelscratcher was a meek little man, with a wife who was his diametrical opposite in every respect. If she opposed him in anything, her opposition went. So did he. One evening he was powerfully perusing the family almanac proverbs, when his Joy Rag stock eye fell on this scupcon of fallacious philosophy:

"Woman is the Sunday of man."

"By gosh! that's great," shouted he. His helpmeet laid down her knitting needles and looked at him in amazement.

"What's great?" she asked after a long pause.

"Say, Susan, did you know you were my Sunday?" he chuckled.

Susan sized him up as if she supposed he were daft; then, nodding her head emphatically and accentuating each word with a blow of her fist on the table, said:

"Granger Gravelscratcher, I may be your Sunday, but I'll not let you have a day of rest until you buy me a bonnet that's fit to wear to church!"

Next morning when the meek little man kindled the kitchen fire with the almanac containing the fatal quotation, he sadly remarked:

"Man is the washday of woman."—New York Recorder.

Tiaras and "American Wilds."

Diamond tiaras are becoming a drug in the market in the trousseau of fashionable young ladies. Miss Violet Mostyn had two among her wedding presents. The new Duchess of Marlborough has already received three, including one of rubies and diamonds. Tiaras were formerly reserved only for the fullest of full dress, and in many cases reposed comfortably for half the year in a banker's safe. Now that women wear so many more jewels in everyday life and carry them about visiting and traveling and in hotels one can only wonder that robberies of jewels are not more frequent.

Beautiful stones and large diamonds of fine water are as rare and expensive as ever, but the hundred and one little trinkets and pins and brooches that please women can now be obtained at a very moderate price. Even the tiaras are composed of a multitude of small stones, which make a considerable show and suffice for ordinary purposes. Yet a tiara means nothing unless it contains fine diamonds. No doubt the preconceived idea that great ladies wear tiaras inspired a curious incident in a play acted with great success in the wilds of America. There a duchess, seated in her boudoir, is informed by her parlor maid that the villain is coming to see her. "Mary," says she, with dignity, "bring me my coronet."—London Graphic.

THE DRUMMER GOT AWAY.

By So Doing He Escaped Well Merited Punishment.

There were eight of us smoking our after supper cigars on the hotel veranda when a small man with a great deal of bustle and energy in his movements came out of the hotel office and called out in a general way:

"Gentlemen, is there a general out there?"

"I am a general, sir," replied one of the group as he half rose and bowed.

"Yes—ah!—glad to see you, general," continued the little man as he advanced and shook hands. "Now, then, have we any colonels present?"

"I am a colonel," replied three men in chorus as they followed the general's example.

"Ha! Glad to see you, colonels, very glad," said the little man as he extended a hand to each in succession. "Let's see. Have we a judge among us here this evening?"

"We have," replied two of the four others.

"So glad to see you, judges, so glad. Shake hands. Beautiful evening this. I presume you other two gentlemen breathe respective titles of major and professor?"

"We do," said the pair of us.

"Ah, glad to know it, awfully glad. Major and professor, shake hands, shake hands. Might have a little more rain, but we can't find much fault with this weather."

"And who are you, if you please?" asked the general.

"I? Oh, I'm only an ex-governor, an ex-cabinet officer, an ex-congressman and at present raising $6,000,000 to put another railroad bridge across the Missouri river. Keep your seats, gentlemen. I wouldn't think of intruding my company on such a distinguished assembly."

The local board of health is going to buy a milk tester. If this is intended as a move against cowless milk we are willing to vouch for its hearty endorsement by the people.

The report that the few remaining Democrats in the country swore off Wednesday and will no longer vote the ticket need not be credited implicitly. The story needs confirmation.

The hustlers for place begin today to swarm into Columbus. The plums are not numerous, neither are they very meaty, but in the rush for them the state will be pretty well represented.

The city council is not "taking water" in the controversy with the Telephone company, but as a matter of fact somebody is. Meanwhile the wires for the fire alarm system will be put up without any further unnecessary delay.

It is expected that the new Ohio statesmen will, as usual, have a cartload of bills to dump on the speaker's desk as soon as the legislature gets down to work. Of course the majority of them will never be enacted into law and will therefore do no harm.

There is likely to be little or no criticism of President Cleveland's appointments on the Venezuelan boundary commission, five very able men, who will proceed on their mission with the full confidence of the American people. Their determinations upon the disputed Venezuelan boundary line will very likely be accepted in full faith by this country.

The tone of the English press has been greatly changed in discussing the Venezuelan boundary question. They do not favor arbitration but if some way can be found like arbitration but not known by that name it is thought the dispute can be settled without either country backing down from the position maintained. While this is all right, will Canada be satisfied without being permitted to eat a few Americans?

The formal declaration of Gov. Bradley, of Kentucky, as a presidential candidate is announced. A convention of leading Republicans of the state have launched the boom in good faith and declare the belief that their candidate has a good show for the nomination. The new governor of the Blue Grass state is not averse to accepting the nomination, but it is understood that he would not have second place on the ticket under any consideration. The Bradley boom, however, only adds one more to the list that still has opportunities to grow between this time and June 16. Meanwhile the more little booms there are the larger appears that big one retained under the exclusive ownership of Gov. William McKinley, of Ohio.

DOCTORS AND ADVERTISING.

[Newspaperdom.]

Folk advertise today who never advertised before, and those who have always advertised now use whole columns where before only a few squares were availed of. We have already indicated the entrance of dentists, specialists and the legal fraternity into the fallow advertising field, although much of this is done cautiously and conservatively, and evidently with a code of ethics, like a Damoclean sword, always before the eyes and over the neck, says the Providence (R. I.) News.

Newspaper advertising is not of itself an evil thing. It contaminates nobody who indulges in it. It is, after all, only a larger way of the word of mouth method. Printers' ink has replaced the town crier; that's all. Any merchant will tell you that he thinks the most of the advertising that a pleased customer affords, who goes and reports to a friend that his house sells goods cheaper than the same goods can be purchased elsewhere, and he only uses newspaper space to accomplish more quickly and spread more widely, the information that is passed around by word of mouth.

If Mr. A. is cured of a dire case of fever, or Mr. B. has his broken arm set in an expeditious manner, or Mrs. C. is delivered of a child with unusual facility, or Johnny D. has his face tied together, where he split it falling off his bicycle, so the scar shall never show, a great many of the neighbors are likely to hear of the doctor who did it, and a good many folk will be thereby led to ring up that particular doctor when in need of any service indicated by the respective cases. And so the doctor's clientage will grow until he has all he can attend to—and more, too—and fame and fortune are at his command.

Doctors who are experts have told us that they might make thousands while they are only making hundreds, if they could but let people know of their skill in special lines; but they refrain, because no money can compensate them for the ostracism from the ranks of their fellow practitioners that would quickly ensue upon using the recognized methods of telling folk about the goods one has to sell—newspaper advertising.

Why should not Dr X, who has successfully tackled a hard case, tell the newspaper readers about it? Goodness knows he is mighty glad to have his gratified patients pass the word around the neighborhood, and thus advertise him in a too feeble way. Honest advertising would be no discredit; it would hasten the reward due to faithful labor.

We shouldn't wonder if some day we should be able to make yearly contracts with our friends, the doctors, for advertising space, without calling down upon them anything but praise from the medical societies, which would only seek to control the honesty, fairness and fair writing of the advertising matter—a code of ethics, in a word, that silently but effectively exists today in all branches of trade, and controls the use of advertising space so that those advertisers who seek to use printers' ink for dishonest statements are sooner or later rebuked by a loss of business.

Miss Mapes' Damage Case.

[Bucyrus Telegraph.]

F. S. Monnett returned today from Chicago, and reports the case of Miss Ellie Mapes against the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railway company for damages on account of personal injury during the World's Fair settled.

The injury was a very serious one, resulting in almost total disablement for a year and was the cause of much painful suffering and expensive hospital treatment. By the terms of settlement the company pays all the court costs, the cost of treatment, compensation for loss of time and a reasonable allowance for the pain and inconvenience endured.

HERE WE ARE AGAIN

MORE ABOUT THE SHIP CANAL THROUGH THIS COUNTY.

Lieutenant Chittenden Submits His Report—The War Talk Has Agitated the Matter—J. W. Scott Talks Interestingly Concerning the Canal Scheme.

The present possibilities of war between England and the United States have agitated, as nothing else could, the matter of a ship canal from Lake Erie to the Ohio river. Lieut. Chittenden has made his report and forwarded it to congress and today, in conversation with Engineer Scott, it dropped out that Lieut. Chittenden favored the Marion, or central, route.

The fact that we have practically no war vessels on Lake Erie is no reason why we should not have and the government realizes that it must not only have vessels but also adequate facilities for coaling them.

What plan could be better than this self same ship canal? The central and eastern routes are both well adapted to carry coal to the lakes at almost nothing compared to what the freight would be by rail, for both these routes bring the great coal fields of Pennsylvania and West Virginia in easy reach and the central route would touch the great Hocking coal fields. So either of these routes are better adapted to the great undertaking than the western route.

Lieut. Chittenden's report shows that on that line it would be necessary to make a raise of 560 feet as the ridge between Cincinnati and Toledo is 560 feet above the level of Lake Erie. The report shows that on the eastern route, the route from Cleveland to Marietta, the raise is 390 feet. Opposed to these routes the central, or Marion route, has a raise to make of only 354 feet and besides that has a natural formed basin for a reservoir, admirably qualified for the purpose with but little artificial assistance.

Engineer Scott says that by his survey this basin would contain 22,000 acres, over thirty-three square miles, and that it would have to be purchased by the government which would be willing to give from $65 to $75 per acre for the land which invested would bring more than the farms annually.

The purchase of the land would thus amount to $1,650,000 and the improvement would not bring less than $2,000,000 to this county.

After Mr. Scott spoke of the fact that a canal would have to be cut from Green Camp to Tiffin, only, as the Scioto could be used south of Green Camp and the Sandusky river north of Tiffin he commented on the fact that the canal would run to the east of this great reservoir and would probably cut the western edge of the Chicago and Erie yards.

As drawn by Lieut. Chittenden the ship canal would have a depth of ten feet sufficient to allow the passage of good sized steamers, such in fact, as the R. B. Hayes, known to most of our citizens.

This immense reservoir besides would be a thing of beauty and make it possible for fine summer resorts near the city. The water would have ordinarily an average depth of seven and a half feet but as it is to be surrounded by a three foot levee the water would probably stand at 9 feet and be dotted here and there by many pretty islands, most of which would be wooded.

Notable among these islands would be one where stands the Sam Hudson house and grove on the Big Island pike beyond the Little Scioto. Another pretty island would be formed on the Green Camp pike at the old Rayl place and two more farther down the pike. The water works plant would also stand on an island and thus it may be seen what a beautiful sheet of water would be formed three miles to the east and west and eleven miles north and south.

The only thing against the Marion route is the fact that the people along it are not hustling while the east and west routes have powerful lobbies at Washington.

NEW YEAR'S AT THE KERR.

Messrs. Bingham & Co. Serve a Rare Dinner to Many Guests.

Messrs. Bingham & Co., the new proprietors of the Kerr House, must be convinced that Marion, as well as the traveling public, is keenly appreciative of the splendid fare served at the Kerr since the change. The dinner bill on Christmas was a pleasant introduction for the new managers, and the New Year's bill further evidenced the fame of the house.

To accommodate the unusual register for New Year's day, the table accommodations of the dining room were put in one immense table and the dining guests made a scene very similar to a big banquet. Nearly an hundred special dinner guests registered and enjoyed the sumptuous bill. The handsome menu cards expressed the management's New Year's greeting, and listed among the rare foods in this locality at this season such choice things as new tomatoes, new cucumbers, blue fish, venison, prairie chickens, pheasant. None of the big city hotels could have offered a more elaborate bill.

THE CITY IN BRIEF.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Priestly are happy over the birth of a daughter New Year's eve.

It is reported that Omer Ayers and Miss Georgia Danhart were married at Hornellsville, N. Y., Monday

The county commissioners went to LaRue, today, on business connected with the new bridge at that place.

Chas. Drew is repairing and overhauling the county clock and it is hoped that he will teach it to "keep a movin.'"

The Marion Brewing and Bottling company has executed a mortgage for $25,000 to the Mansfield Savings and Loan company to secure bonds held by the latter named institution.

The Lodge of Eagis met in the business place of Bener Merchant Wednesday night, and held a very interesting meeting, and will meet Friday night in their hall to consider the applications of eleven candidates The order was organized here last summer with a membership of 44 members, and it now numbers over one hundred.

Dr. J. L. Hensley, the Marion-Morrow representative, and C. L. Patten left today for Columbus, to enter the log-rolling and fence-building with reference to the organization of the legislature. Mr. Patten wants to be 2d assistant sergeant-at-arms of the lower house and his own fitness and Dr. Hensley's strong "pull" make the situation pretty promising.

General Manager King, of the Steam Shovel works, speaking of the outlook of the business for 1896, stated to the STAR Wednesday that he had every evidence at hand to convince him that the business of the company would be greater this year than it was last. He said that at present it did not seem that it would increase double or any such flattering prospects, but it did look like it was going to be better than in 1895

The Gym Contests.

The gymnasium contests given at the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening drew a crowd of interested spectators. At about 7 o'clock Prof Whyte, with a class of twenty-one, took the floor. The boys lined up on the west side of the room, marched around the room several times, when jumping for height was announced. Paul Miller made the highest running jump—5 feet 2 inches.

The horizontal bar work was the special feature, the fellows following Whyte in several exercises, then each doing several tricks of their own. Cheers from the gallery told how well the audience was pleased. With a few tricks on the vaulting horse, the fun of gathering Indian clubs was next. In this work Mark Chase won over the other contestants With a combination hop around the room, Prof. Whyte ordered to break ranks.

The Mortality Report.

The mortality report for the month of December shows that during that time fourteen deaths occurred in the city during the month, and gives the following causes: Neuralgia of the heart, 1. accident, 2. diphtheria, 1; infant, 1; consumption, 1; peritonitis, 1; dropsy, 1. heart disease, 4; spinal meningitis, 1; typhoid fever, 1.

THE SOCIAL ROUNDS

THE NEW YEAR BRINGS MANY ENJOYABLE FUNCTIONS.

Eighty Youngsters and Future Greats Invade the Clark Home and Hold High Carnival—Clubs and Individuals Entertain—Social Galeties.

George, Fred and Laura John Clark entertained eighty of their young friends at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs Ed. Clark, of north State street, at a masquerade party Wednesday evening

The little ones began to arrive about 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon and it was not long after that all the guests were present. The blinds had been drawn and the house was lighted by gas to give the better effect to the many quaint and cute costumes

The little ones formed in line and a grand march was given and a prettier sight is not often seen. Here was a little boy masquerading in girl's clothes and again a little girl in boy's. There were clowns, and kings, and knights and courtiers, sisters of mercy, little Dutch maids and masks representing Pocahontas, Santa Claus and numerous other characters.

About 6 o'clock the youngsters unmasked and choice refreshments were served which were appreciated by the children with a zest which might well be emulated by their elders

After refreshments had come and gone dancing was indulged and all kinds of games were played and it was well on to 8 o'clock before the last little one had left the Clark residence for home.

The gathering was such a one as would make glad the heart of any parent and Mr. and Mrs. Clark may congratulate themselves that their entertainment was one which is sure to be imitated, so great were the pleasures of the evening to the children.

***

A combination of the "Circulus Decem" and the "Babies" entertained their gentlemen friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hane, of east Center street, Wednesday evening.

Dancing was the amusement of the evening and merrily the hours passed away to the music of piano and violin. At a late hour refreshments were served at tables which were none the less heartily enjoyed that they followed hours of devotion to the music of the dance.

It was well after midnight when the dance broke up with mutual avowals on the part of those present that it had been one of the happiest events in the history of either the "Babies" or "The Circle of Ten."

Those present were: Misses Fairfield, Cheney, Wilson, Schultz, Walters, Uhler, Clara Louise Johnston, Mame Christian, Nettie Quigley, Jessie Fisher, Mame John Hane, Nellie Hane, and Florence Bell, of Columbus, and Messrs. Orley Rapp, T. M. Cunningham, Harry Fisher, G. B. Christian, Jr., Will Stose, Harry Barker, Harry G. Thomas, J. I. Beatty, Trace Allen, Sidney Bowen, J. F. Dombaugh, Earl Wilson and Faust Meachey.

***

H. G. Reiser entertained a small company of friends at his home on south Vine street at dinner today.

***

Miss Anna Adams entertained a small company of friends, Wednesday evening, at the Beale-Adams home on east Center street.

While it was in the nature of an impromptu affair it was none the less thoroughly enjoyable nor were the refreshments served the less dainty or elegant.

***

Mr. and Mrs G. A. Wilson entertained a small company of friends at the D. Yake home, on west Center street, Wednesday evening.

At cards the gentlemen carried off all the honors good and bad, as the first prize was won by E. K. Uhler, who received a beautiful piece of cut glass ware, and the price for indifferent playing, a set of juvenile dishes, went to D. O. Weeks.

Delightful refreshments were served to the guests, among whom were Mr. and Mrs. L. B. McNeal, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Uhler, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Beery, Mr. and Mrs. H. Chisholm, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Shute, Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Weeks, the Misses Kraner, Miss Fish and A. L. Honefanger.

***

A most delightful New Year's party was given Wednesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Williams, at their beautiful home on Vine street, in honor of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth. Charades, music and dancing were indulged in by the young misses. At 10:30 a most elaborate menu was served and was heartily enjoyed by all present.

Among the guests present were the Misses DeWolfe, Hamilton, Boyd, Patten, Johnston, Snyder, Conklin, Thomas, Everett, Rhodes, Wynant, McMurray, Hoberman, Yeager, Edna DeWolfe, Johnston, Gates, Fogelson, Wark, Key, Hannawalt, White, Sharpless, Blake and the three Misses Peters and Miss Williams The guests departed at a late hour wishing their hostess many happy New Years in the future.

***

The Primrose club gave a delightful party at the home of Miss Emma Martin, of Jefferson street, Wednesday night, at which the members of the club entertained their friends of the sterner sex.

Games of all kinds were played and the nicest refreshment imaginable were served, making the occasion one long to be remembered by the club and its guests.

Those present were Misses Minnie Bottomfield, Cora Romoser, Callie Dryer, Myrtie Myers, Dora Fiant, Emma Dries, Ida Gompf, Martha LaRue, and Maggie Martin, and Messrs. Will Wark, Claud Coil, Lanna Rathel, Addie Osborne, James Baker, Ray Irey, Harry LaRue, Frank Owen, Gus Feidner, Perry Uncapher and George Martin.

WOMEN AND WORSHIP

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE'S KEEN ANALYSIS OF FAIR SEX TRAITS.

Prudence Dictates That Any Excess of Reverence Should Be on the Man's Side—Is a Woman a Tyrant In Heart Affairs? Her Victims.

[Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.]

IT HAS long been said by a certain class of men, more as a cynicism than as a fact, I doubt, that the worse a man treats a woman the better she likes him. The same thing has been said of a dog (are a woman and a dog co-ordinate?), but it never occurred to one than of the other. Of course nobody could believe it of a woman, and only a brute would say it. What is probably meant by the assertion of that sex is so devoted when she loves that she will often bear almost any kind of treatment from a man rather than surrender her attachment. But this would be unsentimental, and so a thorough master of the world, as every man proves himself to be, refuses to express it save on his own hard way. That ugliness should beget kindness or hate love is contradictory, inconceivable, absurd. It betrays the grossest ignorance of human nature, which, under all normal conditions, returns good for good.

The churlish, snarling exception may be due to a strange fact, often observed in woman, that she handles appreciation, excessive devotion in a man, and frequently seems to resent it by indifference, if not by coldness. It may be only a certain kind of woman who acts so, and it is idle to generalize about her, since she has endless varieties. But these can scarcely be a quarter of the total. Women, home-hating lovers to be loved and prefers even more to love, though all loving implies, in the nature of things, a degree of fee-priority. But does she enjoy receiving far more than she gives? Does she esteem what is called worship? Is she fond of being surpassed in what is thought to be her own proper field? Surely appearances illustrate just the contrary. Who has not seen women fairly idolized by men, regarded as if they were superior beings, placed on a pinnacle to be looked unto and reverenced? And what sort of return do they make for all this? Do they reverence and honor in turn? So far from it, they appear to accept the extraordinary homage not merely as a right, as a matter of course, but with something closely akin to scorn. If they were goddesses, presuming the impossible, they would be more gracious, more sensible of the hypocrisy of the hour. But as simple, generally commonplace creatures their vanity would seem to be hard to the core, and they make to believe themselves worthy of more reverencing than they get.

But is such seeming reluctance? The entire likelihood is that, in their opinion, they deserve no divinizing, or, if they do, not from the source whence it emanates. They might resign to the almost the faintest admiration generally, as is thought to be the habit of the sex, but not particularly, not individually, at least not from him they esteem their lover. Why should they count him an exception? It is not the way of women. Do they not always abase their lovers, humble them in matchless, the men they believe truest at heart, most manly? Their lovers' reason is gone, their intellect compromised, their judgment infallible, their influence omnipotent, their charm supreme. But when they cannot abide the object who called forth all this devotion? Why, the reason is plain enough. It is because the man has ceased to be a lover, has become a husband, and the husband is the natural enemy of the woman. Not that she does not love him, but that she loves him as a husband, and not as a lover. Her love is changed, and she knows it, and he knows it, and the knowledge is fatal.

Women, being human, love to be loved and prefer even more to love, though all loving implies, in the nature of things, a degree of inferiority. But does she enjoy receiving far more than she gives? Does she esteem what is called worship? Is she fond of being surpassed in what is thought to be her own proper field? Surely appearances illustrate just the contrary. Who has not seen women fairly idolized by men, regarded as if they were superior beings, placed on a pinnacle to be looked unto and reverenced? And what sort of return do they make for all this? Do they reverence and honor in turn? So far from it, they appear to accept the extraordinary homage not merely as a right, as a matter of course, but with something closely akin to scorn. If they were goddesses, presuming the impossible, they would be more gracious, more sensible of the hypocrisy of the hour. But as simple, generally commonplace creatures their vanity would seem to be hard to the core, and they make to believe themselves worthy of more reverencing than they get.

But is such seeming reluctance? The entire likelihood is that, in their opinion, they deserve no divinizing, or, if they do, not from the source whence it emanates. They might resign to the almost the faintest admiration generally, as is thought to be the habit of the sex, but not particularly, not individually, at least not from him they esteem their lover. Why should they count him an exception? It is not the way of women. Do they not always abase their lovers, humble them in matchless, the men they believe truest at heart, most manly? Their lovers' reason is gone, their intellect compromised, their judgment infallible, their influence omnipotent, their charm supreme. But when they cannot abide the object who called forth all this devotion? Why, the reason is plain enough. It is because the man has ceased to be a lover, has become a husband, and the husband is the natural enemy of the woman. Not that she does not love him, but that she loves him as a husband, and not as a lover. Her love is changed, and she knows it, and he knows it, and the knowledge is fatal.

The charlish, snarling exception may be due to a strange fact, often observed in woman, that she handles appreciation, excessive devotion in a man, and frequently seems to resent it by indifference, if not by coldness. It may be only a certain kind of woman who acts so, and it is idle to generalize about her, since she has endless varieties. But these can scarcely be a quarter of the total. Women, home-hating lovers to be loved and prefers even more to love, though all loving implies, in the nature of things, a degree of inferiority. But does she enjoy receiving far more than she gives? Does she esteem what is called worship? Is she fond of being surpassed in what is thought to be her own proper field? Surely appearances illustrate just the contrary. Who has not seen women fairly idolized by men, regarded as if they were superior beings, placed on a pinnacle to be looked unto and reverenced? And what sort of return do they make for all this? For [illegible] craves worshipers generally, but any one man who, among a circle of admirers, individualizes himself as her lover, attracting her as such, and then rises into worship, is apt to cancel his attractiveness by such rising. This amatory worship is incapable of criticism as it is of resentment. It will accept anything gratefully, even marked slights, disdainful indifference, wanton affronts. It is a cycle to slavishness. It will arouse in and never indignation against her who receives it and patrons contempt for him who shows it.

It is not strange per se that an ordinary woman [illegible] a man who will bear cheerfully her naughtiness, her airs, if she suppose him abjectly spiritless. But usually she knows that her victim is a craven only with her, that he has in his own walks a reputation for courage, chivalry. In this relation to her all of his intense love [illegible] and falls into disorder. [illegible] ought to have some tender compassion [illegible] not sympathy with him, on this account. But she shows for the poor, half-distracted man nothing but contempt and bitterness. Not infrequently, as she may accept his attention, may permit some formal caress, she cannot [illegible] his selfish constraint without revealing irritability.

If he would suddenly change, if he would disclose the real strength of his nature, would give her to understand that not base treatment had at last awakened his righteous indignation, that he was done with her forever, a hundred to one she would descend from her Pegasus in tearful contrition and with eloquent appeals for pardon. A woman resolved to subjugate, who never has her subjugated is a pathetic spectacle of humiliation. No man who cares for her love should ever venture to love her too much. Prudence dictates that any excess should be on her side. He will reverence her excess; she will abuse his.

There is often a strange quality in her which in a man might be called cowardice. It is due, as respects her affections, to the triumph of her sex and her determination to enjoy it at all hazards. It is to be feared that in affairs of the heart she is inclined to play the tyrant, and, unless counteracted, to be capricious and cruel.

WOMAN'S WORLD IN PARAGRAPHS.

Is the World Out of Joint With Women of Today?

Last week I ran away for two hours and went to a parlor lecture. It was on the "Philosophy of the New Life." The new life and its philosophy did not impress me anything like so powerfully as the audience did. It was composed of 40 women and two men. One of the men was there as a matter of business, so he did not count. It was, therefore, 40 women and one man. The ladies were handsomely dressed, as all New York women of the well to do classes are. They wore rich silks and furs and modish bonnets. There were diamonds not a few. The ladies were mostly middle aged and elderly—at least they looked so. I saw only one young girl there. It was the look on their faces that held me. It was a tired, nervous, distressed, unhappy look. A look, too, as if these well to do women were seeking for something they could not find, just as they were doing. They were an epitome of the world of women today. They were well to do, they had their husbands, children and friends. They had everything the world considers necessary for feminine happiness. They had sounded the depths of woman's sphere, so to speak, and found it wanting. The lines in their faces, the gray hair, the nervous, eager, questioning look, the worn, unhappy expression, told without words the result of long ages of training women to the privately narrow and conventional domestic life, without other hope or outlook. And yet people wonder that women age more rapidly than men. It is wholly because of the wretched narrowness of their lives, their lamentable ignorance and lack of large interests. They all have to be cut and trimmed to the same pattern, the pattern the Mrs Grundy of the time has set down. If in the generations past a woman arose and showed the slightest tendency to originality of thought or action, it was repressed as a crime. It might injure her matrimonial prospect. To please men was held up as her main object in life because she was dependent on men for support. The result is not much more pleasing to men than to women. The result was witnessed in the faces at the lecture, faces that told of nervous unrest, of hopeless, broken lives and of a discontent unfathomable. The remedy? The remedy is to give women larger, fuller, sweeter lives. Give them a concept on in the world's affairs, give them intellectual, moral and spiritual development of the widest and deepest.

The New Jersey Woman Suffrage association is still actively endeavoring to have cut the antiquated laws that hamper women in that state, saying nothing of some of the antiquated judges that interpret the laws. The annual meeting of the society was held at Plainfield, and Mrs Florence Howe Hall of Orange was elected president. Mrs Hall is one of the gifted daughters of Julia Ward Howe. Rev Antoinette Brown Blackwell was made vice president. The secretary of the Association is Mrs Irving Ange, corresponding secretary, Dr Mary D Hussey, treasurer, Mrs S R Kiem, auditor, Miss Susan W Lippincott.

SECRET OUT AT LAST.

GENERAL JOHN A. LOGAN WAS "TOM ANDERSON."

Known That He Wrote "Uncle Daniel's Story of Tom Anderson and Twenty Great Battles"—Secret Well Kept—Public Men Attacked In the Book.

John A. Logan's secret is out at last. The disclosures to be made in the following article will create surprise, if not a sensation. In 1886 a book appeared from the press entitled "Uncle Daniel's Story of Tom Anderson and Twenty Great Battles." It was published anonymously "by an officer of the Union army."

The little work attracted a good many Prominent public men were cordially attacked in its pages, their names being paraphrased. Some of them, conspicuously Senator Voorhees of Indiana, published interviews in self defense. All efforts to identify the author proved fruitless. The secret is now out John A Logan was the author, and Tom Anderson was himself

General Logan wrote the book in 1884 and the following year. He began it while he was on the Republican ticket with Blaine as a candidate for vice president. When he appeared at the capital of Illinois, December, 1884, to take personal charge of his campaign for re election to the senate, he was engaged putting the finishing touches to his manuscript. After midnight, when his rooms at the Leland hotel were cleared of visitors, General Logan sat down at his desk and wrote upon this story of the war.

Finally he called in a number of friends whose advice as to the literary merits of his effort he craved. With characteristic bluntness General Logan asked them to tell him frankly whether or not he was making a fool of himself by writing such a story. He especially wanted to know if he was too severe in his criticisms upon public men. General Logan pledged these friends to secrecy. He afterward required the same pledge from his publishers, and the secret has been well guarded from that day to this.

General Logan told those who were honored with his confidence that all the incidents used in his book were actual occurrences. He regarded the story more as an autobiography than anything else. The framework of the story was imaginary, but its substance was drawn from General Logan's own experience and observations. The inscription on the fly leaf was as follows:

"Uncle Daniel" is presented to the public A truthful picture, based upon the events of the late war.

This volume is dedicated to the Union soldiers and their children.

The author. New York, Jan. 1, 1896.

In order to conceal his identity and to avoid pointed references to prominent men in military and civil life General Logan changed geographical and proper names to suit his purpose, although nearly always leaving a clew to his meaning. The story is told by Uncle Daniel after the close of the war, and this Uncle Daniel in real life was Daniel McCook, father of the famous family of McCook boys, who entered the army from Ohio.—Boston Journal.

A HUGE UNDERTAKING.

Great Idea of the American Museum of Natural History.

The trustees of the American Museum of Natural History in New York have decided to establish an anthropological exhibit, which will be one of the most in the world. They propose to have groups of figures illustrating the industries, mode of life and characteristics of every important race on the globe.

This undertaking will require many years to complete, but the first group will be in place within two or three weeks. For some time past attaches of the museum have been out west taking photographs and getting measurements of the various tribes of Indians in North America and on the north Pacific coast. Plaster casts have been taken of the faces, hands and feet of typical members of the tribes, and, together with the measurements and photographs, forwarded to New York. These data will enable the modelers to construct life size plaster figures, clothed in native dress.

Dr. Franz Boaz, the anthropologist of the museum, has charge of the work and will arrange the figures into groups each one representing as nearly as possible a scene from an Indian village.—Boston Herald.

Little Nick's Surprise.

The diplomatic representation of Nicaragua to the United States has been discontinued for the first time in many years, and as a measure of economy no legation will be maintained at Washington. This action is a matter of surprise to officials, owing to the importance of some of the questions, notably the canal, in which the United States and Nicaragua are mutually interested.

Dr. Guzman has presented his letters of recall to the state department and has entered upon the practice of medicine at his home, which was formerly the Nicaraguan legation.

Dead Hand In Evidence.

The hand of a dead man, from which two fingers are missing, will be introduced as evidence in the case of Mrs. Fannie Linsley against the Central Medical college of Missouri in a damage suit for $75,000.

Linsley's body was stolen from Ashland cemetery several months ago and dissected in a medical college. The remains were then thrown into a box and buried in the potter's field, where they were found and identified by the crippled hand from which two fingers had been cut during Linsley's lifetime.

It Contains Chicago Feet.

And still another million to Chicago university! Her stocking must be abnormally capacious.—Boston Herald.

ORIGIN OF JINGO.

How It Came to Apply to Advocates of a War Policy.

The origin of the word "jingo" is interesting at this time, when one is confronted with it so often. At the time of the close of the Russo-Turkish war, which, as all readers of history know, terminated so disastrously for the Turks and caused a feeling of apprehension in England that the Russians were bent on taking Constantinople and the ultimate dismemberment of the Turkish empire, a change which could not be tolerated, the public feeling found expression in England upon the stage in pantomimes and in the music halls by numerous patriotic songs. One of these is as follows:

The dogs of war are loose, and the rugged Russian bear
Full bent on blood and robbery, has crawled out of his lair
It seems a thrashing now and then will never help to tame
That brute, and so he's out upon the same old game.
The how did he lose to give him some excuse
To crawl back to his den again—all efforts were no use
He hungered for his victim he's pleased when blood is shed,
But let us now his sin may all recoil on his own head

CHORUS

We don't want to fight, but by jingo, if we do,
We've got the men, we've got the ships,
We've got the money too
We fought the bear before and while we're Britons true,
The Russians shall not have Constantinople

The song became most popular and was heard on every street corner from every organ grinder and was whistled by every bootblack. Shortly after this the election campaign began in which Gladstone, the head of the Liberals, attacked the Tory party, then led by the Earl of Beaconsfield, who was in power. The Tory foreign policy was ridiculed, and they were stigmatized by the Liberals as "the party of bloodshed, glory and jingo."

From the time of this election campaign, which resulted in the defeat of the Tories and the accession of the "peace party," (Gladstone's 1880 administration, the word "jingo" has been used to denote an individual or section of a party ready to rush, without mature consideration, into all the horrors of war.—Dick Dasher in Pittsburg Dispatch.

UNCLE SAM'S NEW LIFEBOAT

He Has One That Will Not Upset and Bails Itself.

The first of 12 lifeboats the government ordered recently has arrived from Port Huron, Mich. It is 34 feet long and 8 feet beam, fitted for oars or sails. It is called the Sandy Hook and will be stationed at Sandy Hook under Skipper Trevoman Patterson's control. Six of the new boats are for the Atlantic coast and six for the Pacific coast and the great lakes.

The new boat is self bailing, and she cannot upset. Captain Thomas D Walker, an inspector in the life saving service, is enthusiastic over her. "Fill her with water," he said, "and she bails herself out in 15 seconds. She cannot be kept in any position but right side up.

"Fifty persons can be saved in her at a time. She has a deck, and the space below is divided into airtight compartments. There are air tanks fore and aft reaching above the deck. She will not sink until four-fifths of the air tanks are burst."—New York World.

HIS HEARING RESTORED.

A Man Deaf For Years Can Now Hear, Thanks to Schlatter.

News has been received of a remarkable cure effected by Francis Schlatter before he recently left Denver. The patient was George Milliken, who for the past five years has been a resident of Leadville, Colo.

For many years Mr Milliken has been deaf, his affliction being, it is thought, produced by sickness when a boy. Hearing of Schlatter's wonderful cures, Mr. Milliken went to Denver, but the throng was so great that he could not get near the healer. Following the example of many others, Milliken passed up his handkerchief to be blessed, and it was returned to him with instructions to apply it to the region of his ailment.

When Mr. Milliken retired to bed that night, the handkerchief was laced over the affected ear, and in the morning when he awoke his hearing was restored. The cure seems to have been permanent, and Mr. Milliken and his friends are overjoyed.

To Rival Sorosis.

Representative Bennett of Brooklyn has introduced in the house a bill incorporating Rachel McAuley Louisa Eldridge Minnie Maddern Fiske, Bertha Welborn, Rosa Rand Lauta A. Palmer and Elizabeth Wood Doremus as charter members of the Professional Woman's League of the United States.

The object is for the general benefit of women engaged in professional and charitable pursuits. It is understood that the organization proposes to become a stronger rival to Sorosis than it ever has in the past.

A Long Island Rabbit Cat.

Sylvester Howard, a resident of Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., is the owner of a Maltese cat which gave birth to five kittens a few days ago. One of the youngsters has a head like a cat and body, legs and tail like a rabbit. It has long hind legs, which it uses like a bunny. The soles of the feet are shaped exactly like those of a rabbit, and it has a short, white cottony tail. The freak is now at the home of Eugene Howard at West Neck, N. Y.

And Now's the Time to Prove Them.

The average age of the 15 new senators is exactly 11 years, only one being over 50, and another is but 31. This is the youngest body of men who ever entered the senate, and most of them are practically new to public life. It remains to be seen what effect such an infusion of blood, in which the fever of life has not yet been subdued, will have upon that august and monotonous body.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

SELECTIONS

BREEDING BUFFALOES.

Some of the Hybrids Produced Are Fine Animals.

A famous Montana character is Charlie Allard of Ravalli. Mr. Allard is famous mainly because he is one of the owners of the largest herd of buffaloes in the country, and no man living has given to these now rare animals more patient study and attention than he.

"The coldest storms of winter do not trouble them," he says, "for their thick shaggy coats are windproof. During the heavy snows and blizzards they climb the hills and turning their breasts to the wind defy the storm. They feed where the snow is thinnest. Cattle are driven before a storm and will often go with the wind 60 or 100 miles from the accustomed range unless they reach a sheltered spot. Horses turn their backs to a storm, but the buffalo faces it every time. They seem to keep in about the same condition of flesh the year round and are as good eating in the spring as they are in the fall, and a buffalo steak is as fine a morsel as ever a man made a meal of. About two years ago I purchased the Jones herd of buffaloes, which was at Omaha. There were 21 of them in the herd, and we paid, for I have a partner now, $18,000 for the lot. Marchel Pablo, a well known cattleman, has joined me in the business, and for the past year has had entire charge of them, so that I do not know just exactly how many we have—about 140 I should judge now, and by the next fall there will be fully 200 of them.

"We have experimented in crossing buffaloes with all breeds of cattle, and the results are satisfactory. The Polled Angus stock when crossed with the buffalo produces a magnificent animal. The fur is finer and closer than that of the buffalo, and the meat is sweet and wholesome. We are procuring as many of these animals as possible, but will not put any on the market for several years yet. We are not selling any buffaloes, either, for the reason that we need them all at present. We receive letters every day from museums, parks and shows wanting them in all quantities, and though we might dispose of one or two singly we have no pairs to sell.

"A good buffalo hide is worth $100 now in the market, and heads bring from $200 to $500 when mounted, and the value of these is steadily increasing, so that buffalo breeding is as good an investment as real estate. Our herd is the only one I know about of any size. There is a small one in the Texas Panhandle, and these, with the few that roam in the National park, are the sole remnants of the thousands which roamed the prairies but a few years ago."—Exchange.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland.

Mrs. Cleveland always refers to him as "the president" both in his presence and in his absence. A member of the cabinet says that he once heard her call him "Grover" when they were skylarking a little on a fishing trip, but he thinks she was only making fun. He does not know that she has ever called him "Grover" since, although he has been with them a great deal. Sometimes she addresses him as "Mr. Cleveland," but when she speaks of him in the third person she never uses his name. It is always "the president says" or "the president went to town" or "the president likes to live at Woodley better than in the White House." When the children are present, she invariably addresses him as "papa." He calls her "Frank" almost invariably except on occasions of formality or in the presence of strangers. When he speaks of her in her absence to the members of the cabinet and other friends he usually says "my wife."—Chicago Record.

How to Have Two Birthdays In One Year.

As we sailed due west over the Pacific one hour was lost in each 1,000 miles of progress, and when we reached the half way point around the world from Greenwich (180 degrees) a day was dropped in mid ocean. In passing from Nov. 3 to Nov. 4, or from Saturday to Monday, was quite a new experience. An officer on board tells me that he spent two Christmases last year while coming from Japan to San Francisco, and a fellow passenger had the unique experience of having two birthdays during his voyage in the same direction.—Baltimore Sun.

READY FOR A FIGHT.

PUERTO RICANS PREPARING TO REBEL AGAINST SPAIN.

Estrada Palma and Dr. Henna Have Made an Offensive and Defensive Alliance With Cuba—How the Islanders Are Downtrodden by Spanish Misrule.

Members of the Puerto Rican revolutionary party, who have organized a junta to work in conjunction with the Cuban junta, are purchasing arms and fitting out an expedition. The organization of the party and of the junta has met with the approval of Puerto Ricans in New York and elsewhere, who realize that a decisive blow can be struck for liberty now that Spain's energy is devoted to quelling the insurrection in Cuba.

It was positively learned the other day that Senor Estrada Palma, on behalf of the Cuban junta, has entered into a compact with Dr. J. Julio Henna, president of the Puerto Rican revolutionary party, whereby both parties will co-operate in aiding the causes of Cuba and Puerto Rico. President Henna acknowledged that he had been in consultation with President Palma and that steps will at once be taken to assist the people of Puerto Rico, who are anxiously awaiting the signal to rise.

A meeting of the members of both the Cuban and Puerto Rican juntas will be held at the Cuban headquarters, when a plan of campaign favorable to the Puerto Ricans will be decided upon. The Cuban junta realizes that it has secured powerful allies in the war against Spain. With the development of an insurrection in Puerto Rico, the efforts of the Spanish to put down the war in Cuba will, necessarily, be weakened, and troops will be sent from the island of Cuba to Puerto Rico.

For months past the revolutionary Puerto Ricans in New York have been corresponding with the leading revolutionary spirits in their island, and President Henna said the other day that 30 towns had been heard from whose inhabitants are ready to revolt when the proper time comes.

He said: "We addressed communications also to our general delegate, Dr. Ramon E. Betances, who is also agent for the Cubans in Paris, and to other prominent Cubans and Puerto Ricans abroad who are eager to see Puerto Rico free. From them we received great encouragement and proffers of assistance. They forwarded me the necessary documents of indorsement.

"I realize that a few men have no right to force a revolution, even in the cause of liberty, but our people are waiting only for leaders, and revolution is what the people want. Our plans are maturing.

"Cuba's success means Puerto Rico's triumph. We will aid Cuba, and she will aid us. When we are prepared for battle, our people will rise, armed with guns and ammunition sent from this and other countries.

"Expeditions will be fitted out and landed on the coasts. Spain cannot prevent the outbreak in Puerto Rico. The concentration of her navy and army in Cuba makes our chances of success very encouraging. Money is coming in rapidly for the purchase of arms and ammunition. Like Cubans, Puerto Ricans are compelled to suffer the burden of an absurd and heavy taxation. Our people are downtrodden and enslaved. Outrages by the Spanish government upon the people are of common occurrence. Our police is composed of ex-convicts sent from Spain, and our people are subjected to gross outrages at the hands of these men, who are invested with a power that makes them petty tyrants.

"Sales and purchases cannot be effected between individuals without the payment of taxes. Taxes are exacted from persons going from one town to another, and passports, upon which a tax is also levied, are demanded all over the island. The money issued by the Spanish government in Puerto Rico are colonial medals. There are no educational facilities. There is nothing but a life of slavery in Puerto Rico under Spanish rule, and that on an island which nature has generously blessed.

"We realize our strength now. We, too, will fight for independence, and with Spain's waning energies divided between the two countries Cubans and Puerto Ricans hope to achieve their freedom."—New York Journal.

Met at 1:30; Wed at 1:45.

A marriage, romantic in the extreme, was solemnized in the office of the county clerk at Glasgow, Ky., the other afternoon. The groom and bride had never so much as heard of the other's existence until that day, and met for the first time when they were brought face to face in the county clerk's office and introduced by a mutual friend preparatory to the application for a license.

The groom is John Underwood, a prosperous farmer near Temple Hill and 65 years old. The bride was Mrs. Martha J. Turner, a widow 24 years old, who came from South Carolina about two months ago. The mutual friend pictured to the groom the virtues and excellences of the young widow, and to her he recited the sterling worth and good qualities of the farmer. Commissioned by the latter with a proposition of marriage, he returned with an acceptance from the widow. They set eyes upon each other at 1:30 o'clock, and at 1:45 o'clock a local minister had pronounced them husband and wife.—St. Louis Republic.

Thought He Had Heard of Him.

A proud Republican papa and his 13 year-old boy called on the speaker, and the youngster, for the want of something better to say, piped out:

"Mr. Maine Reed, we have all of your books in our library, and I think your 'Scalp Hunters' is fine."

Mr. Reed explained that he was not the celebrated Captain Mayne Reid, and the boy looked very much disappointed.—Washington Times.

REACHING THE PEOPLE!

If there is an advertiser who hasn't made his fall contracts, who makes his contracts on a business basis, we want his eye or ear. It is useless to talk to the sentimental advertiser. Our argument is a business one.

We Believe the Star, With Its Daily and Weekly Editions, Goes Into More Homes in Marion County Than All Other Marion Papers Put Together.

We do believe this. We know that honest advertising in the Star brings returns. The best advertisers in Marion attest the Star's ability to bring returns.

The business advertising deal is made for profit. It costs more to buy an ad in the Star than any other paper, but real circulation considered, it is much the cheapest.

We will be glad to quote rates and exhibit circulation records upon application. Get in line now. There's prosperity in the air this fall.

UHLER, PHILLIPS & CO.'S

FIFTH ANNUAL CLEARANCE SALE FOR FIFTEEN DAYS!

Beginning Saturday Morning, Jan. 4th, at 8 a. m. Don't Forget the Time.

THIS sale will prove the most stupendous, the most gigantic, the greatest money saving sale that was ever attempted in the enterprising city of Marion. We have given "Panic Sales," we have given "Blue Ticket Sales," we have given "Destruction Sales," but this sale shall totally eclipse the efforts of former years. The other successful sales, that have caused such consternation in the ranks of dismayed competition, will be paled into utter insignificance by this mighty upheaval. Dry Goods are advancing. Congress is about to place a high tariff on Wool and Manufactured Woolen Goods. Even these circumstances shall not deter us from making the terrific sacrifice of goods already advancing in price. You will probably never see goods sold at such prices again. The nimble nickel or the mighty dollar will reap a great harvest at this sale.

To Help this Great Clearance Sale Along

We have purchased from Green, Joyce & Co., the large and thrifty Wholesale Dry Goods House, of Columbus, Ohio, before their stock taking, at our price, thousands of dollars worth of New Goods in broken lots, odds and ends, that were not made to be carried over, but to be sold at under-the-hammer prices. In this large deal will be found seasonable merchandise worth one hundred cents on the dollar. We will sell it for less than fifty cents on the dollar.

We've got too many Cloaks too many Dress Goods. Too many Blankets, too much Underwear.

Our stock is too large, we can't afford to carry so many goods. They must sell. They will sell at this sale. Prices have been arranged to close out certain lines quickly. The following will impress you with their extreme cheapness. Competition may attempt to imitate us, but their heavy expenses of doing business will not allow them even a place in this our annual race for business. Our reputation for CUTTING PRICES in January sales shall be MORE THAN sustained during this sale.
